Prerequisites
Course description	The course will offer the student a guided study in the major works of chamber music between the years (approximately) 1750 A.D. to 1900 A.D. Central to the course will be the musical (listening) selections that will trace the development of musical style in chamber music during these years. The course will be primarily analytical in focus and will examine the thematic, formal, structural, and stylistic features of important repertory chamber music works composed during this time period. A detailed list of the works to be studied (related to the distributed readings) will be provided in the detailed course syllabus. The course will consist of a series of 3 study "units" each concluding with a test or the final examination. For each unit there will be an in-class presentation by each student addressing one of the listening examples on the listening list. Each of these presentations will be written up as short analytical papers. The tests and exam will focus upon the readings from the text and the listening examples. (See details below.)
Course learning outcomes	By the completion of this course, successful students will: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Have a knowledge of a selected repertoire of chamber music during the Classical and Romantic periods. 2. Have a knowledge of the central facts of European musical, social, and political history during the same period. 3. Understand the basic principles of composition that inform chamber music from 1750 to 1900 A.D. 4. Have a listening knowledge of the different styles that were present in chamber music from 1750 to 1900. A.D.
